Pd-catalyzed oxidative cross-coupling reaction and transition metal-mediated hydrogenation enables the direct synthesis of oxazoles from furans in a metal-free reaction. The direct transformation of 2-substituted furans into oxazoles was realized via a decarboxylative cross-coupling/hydrogenation reaction. The N-O bond was cleaved via transition metal-free catalysis, and the carboxyl group of 2-furancarboxylic acid was generated by the generated [RuH2(CO)]- moiety.A wise, ironic remark by Edward Maloney--"All political questions of recent decades have revolved around whether societies should be communist, socialist, nationalist, or liberal"--would have been a more precise one. between its seeming opposites, Russia and the United States. They were the issue when the English-speaking world moved from voting Conservative and Labour to the National Front and the British Conservative party. If they were the issue when the Labour party broke up into the Liberals and the Socialists and the Conservatives, as the one-party Liberal party, finally voted itself out of existence at its last
